TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Nebraska was admitted to the Union as the thirty-seventh state in March, 1867. The area now constituting the state was included in the Louisiana Purchase in 1803 and belonged successively to the district of Louisiana (1804-5), the territory of Louisiana (1805-1812), the territory of Missouri (1812-1834), the "Indian Country" (1834-1854), and the territory of Nebraska (1854-1867). At the time of its organization the territory of Nebraska comprised, in addition to the area of the present state, territory now forming portions of North and South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, and Colorado; but the organization of Dakota and Colorado territories in 1861 and Idaho territory in 1863 left Nebraska territory with boundaries very nearly the same as those of the present state. In 1882, however, a small tract of land, formerly a part of Dakota territory, lying south of the present northern boundary of Nebraska and between the Missouri and Keyapaha Rivers, was annexed, and in 1908 another small tract, now in the northeastern part of the state, was ceded by South Dakota.

According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, the population of Nebraska is 1,296,372, which represents an increase of 104,158, or 8.7 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent.

The following summary shows the population of Nebraska from 1860 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole. (The area enumerated in 1860 was substantially the same as that of the present state.)

Counties.—Nebraska has 93 counties, 89 of which have the same boundaries as in 1910. Of these 89 counties, 56 show increases and 33 decreases in population during the past 10 years. One new county, Arthur, has been organized from a part of McPherson County since 1910. (See Table 1.) It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population, to combine these two counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state of Nebraska is 76,808 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 16.9 (see Table 1), as against 15.5 in 1910 and 13.9 in 1900.

POPULATION—NEBRASKA.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of Nebraska are made up of 1,474 primary divisions, comprising 933 election precincts, 503 townships, 37 cities, and 1 village. The secondary divisions are 475 in number, comprising 55 cities, 16 towns, and 404 villages. Most of these secondary divisions form parts of the primary divisions in which located; but each of 10 cities and 1 village is coextensive with a township or precinct, and each of 4 cities, 1 town, and 19 villages comprises parts of 2 or more townships or precincts. In addition to these minor civil divisions, the state includes 1 island, which is unorganized. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Nebraska has 92 cities, of which Omaha, with a population of 191,601, is the largest, and Lincoln, with 54,948, is second in size. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 9,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Nebraska living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 23.7 per cent in 1900 to 26.1 per cent in 1910 and to 31.3 per cent in 1920.
